Departmental Policy on Access to Critical Data using Mobile Devices

The Department of Mathematics expects that accessing critical data using mobile devices will be a rare exception, granted only in cases where the need for access cannot be met during normal business hours with a secure desktop computer. Any faculty or staff member who believes they have the need to access, store, or manipulate critical information using a mobile device will apply for permission to do so from the Chair of the Department of Mathematics. The application must include a convincing description of the need. The device to be used must be presented to the department’s IT Pro for inspection to guarantee that the device meets the requirements of University Policy.
